FCC CHAIRMAN PAI TO PRESENT AWARDS FOR ADVANCEMENT IN ACCESSIBILITY AT THE 2019 M-ENABLING SUMMIT

BETHESDA, MD (March 28, 2019) – The organizers of the M-Enabling Summit are pleased to announce that the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) will be returning to present the 2019 FCC Chairman's Awards for Advancement in Accessibility (Chairman's AAA) at the M-Enabling Summit on June 18 from 4:45 pm till 5:30 pm.

Recognizing the importance of innovative communications technology designed for people with disabilities, FCC Chairman Ajit Pai will deliver the keynote address to open the evening's 8th annual awards ceremony. Awards are given based on the inventiveness, affordability, availability, and potential impact of the technology for intended users.

Ajit Pai has served as Chairman of the FCC since January 2017. Under Chairman Pai's leadership, the FCC has played a leading role in advancing accessibility innovation and competition in the field of information and communication technologies. The Commission remains committed to working with key participants such as ICT industry professionals, advocacy organizations, and accessibility experts as it works to fully deploy 5G services. For more information about the Chairman's AAA, please visit: www.fcc.gov/general/chairmans-awards-advancements-accessibility.

This year's Summit program, with its theme of "Accessibility: Transforming Users' Experience," will focus on consumer technology innovations and market advancements, with over 120 speakers, private sector leaders, app developers, policy makers, mobile accessibility experts and disability advocates sharing their knowledge and experience to attendees. Confirmed presenters include high-level representatives of leading industry related Fortune 500 companies and organizations facilitating the accessible technology sector. The 8th edition of the M-Enabling Summit will be held on June 17-19, 2019 at the Renaissance Arlington Capital View Hotel, in Washington, D.C.
